AVON... ITS HISTORY by Marie C Preston (12/25/1947)

"The sites of several crossroads or 'corners' are found south of the State Road (Routes 5 and 20), and east of the Pole Bridge road. ... At Lamb's Corner, there was an old cobblestone blacksmith shop, a woodworking shop, and the home of John Sutton, the noted horse trainer. The location of this little crossroads community was at the place where the Sutton Road joins the Bronson Hill Road. ... Scarcely a trace remains of the thriving, old crossroads settlements but they flourished in the days of handwork and from the small shops at the 'corners' came

1852: At the corner there were 3 houses in a row from the corner north on Bronson Hill (J Lamb, W Lamb, Mrs Corey). On the north side of Sutton Rd was "BS" and next to it "F Lamb". By 1858 John Sutton had acquired the "F Lamb" property on Sutton Rd. By 1872 map, "J Sutton" house is still there but the BSS shop is gone.

EMAIL from Holly C. Watson, Livingston County Historian

"I just listened to an oral interview done in 1953 with Louise Green, an East Avon resident. She was asked about Lamb's shop on the corner of Bronson Hill Road and Sutton Road in Avon and whether it was a cobblestone. All she said about it was that the lower half was cobblestone and the upper was wood. She had lived on Bronson Hill Road for her whole life, as far as I can tell, and she was born in 1872. This interview will be made available before too long on NY Heritage."
